Chapter 1 by Cat4055

Let me guess, you went ahead and read this story, you just had to click on it because your instincts told you to. If I had a dollar for every time someone did something because they were told NOT to I would be writing this from a mansion and making more money by getting people to read this story. OK enough of that, now on to the um real story. This will be the worst story you have ever read so don't read it. OK now I'll actually go on to the story. It's also totally not a SF story. Think before you scroll down and read it.

Actually I'm not going to write it. I'm just going to bore you by making a list of things that count as things SF stories do wrong. Well, at least most SF stories. I bet most of you have read my everything wrong with horror stories, well, I'm making one about SF.

1. You know how in TV SF or even in some stories they show/make sound in space. For instance in Dr. Who the episode with the sun that was alive well when they were heading towards the sun and you could hear the engines in space, that was wrong.

2. Faster-Than-Light-Travel. I bet you guys are thinking, wow that's so cool, well it isn't. Reaching the speed of light is not a good idea. You need a whole lot of energy to that as in an infinite amount of energy, don't do it.

3. Kinda has to do with 2. How do you dodge laser bolts. I mean they are going as fast as light because they are light so how in the world do you dodge something that is going 186,000 miles per second. Sure, if the characters are a bad shot but if they aren't then you can't dodge it, I'm sorry those people who wanted to grow up and be able to dodge laser bolts like true Jedi, I just crushed your dreams.

4. Aliens that look like humans. I'm sorry those people who wish they were an alien sent to Earth, it's not gonna happen. Earth is the only planet that we could evolve on. Every planet will have different evolution for life forms. And the chances of the universe having like 10 planets with humanoid aliens on it is very unlikely.

5. Half-breed aliens can't happen. That is like saying, "Hey, let's make a human cow person." our DNA is just too different for that to actually work. Also, for 4, how would we have babies with them if they aren't human...

6. Shape-shifting aliens. Don't worry, your couch is not an alien waiting for you to sit down on it so that it can eat you. I only have one problem with this. Say that you are a couch and you turn into a mouse (rhyming wasn't intentional) then where would all that extra mass go? would it just float into the air and then come back to your body when you needed to be bigger? I'm fine with it if the alien shifts into something with roughly the same mass but other than that I won't like it.

7. (I'm almost done) Time travel. Okay, I'm fine with going into the future. I like that part of it. Well, not going into the future, wait that's not what I meant at all... I meant I'm fine with time slowing down. Remember 2? How you can't go faster than the speed of light? Well, going backwards in time would make you go faster than the speed of light. And that doesn't work. I ~~guess you could go through a worm-hole... But that would require an exotic matter with~~

9. (I promise this is the last one) Why do all the planets look the same as our planet and have major things wrong with their ecosystem? OK I'll give an example. Look at Tatooine, if you don't know what that is you don't deserve to read this. It looks just like Tunisia ... you know, on the continent of Africa, on Earth. Seriously, planets do not have that much similarity. Also, look at Hoth, it's made of ice. Firstly, how does that happen?! I mean, look at Earth, we have forests, deserts, jungles, oceans, ice, etc... but most of the planets in SF are made of one type of ecosystem, come on! That is terrible.

OK, I'm done ranting, you can stop reading this now, Why are you still reading this?! Stop wasting your life and go out there and make a good horror stories without making me rant about it. Do it for me, a random strange online who you have probably never met, I believe that you can do it. Write in here, use my rules to make it better and more realistic!
